

Alloway Remembers: Tales of Town and Township (A Publication of the Alloway Township [NJ] Bicentennial Committee 1978)

In the Preface Mae W. Allen writes, What this history is will be quickly apparent to anyone reading it. We have quite simply gathered from books, from newspapers, from people who remember, and even from children who have asked questions and recorded the answers all the stories, factual or fictional, that committee members could collect and preserve. Because someone reading a book always knows more, we must point out that this history is not complete. Because someone else reading what we have presented is sure to feel that he knows better, we hasten to say that we are fallible. If errors occur, they will be admitted freely. The people who spot them and have authentic corrections should make their superior information known at once to our chairman. Because our contributions have come from many sources, there will be some duplications. There will even be some contradictions. It is our hope that readers will be stirred to discussions and that difference of opinion will shed light on disputed subjects. A somewhat similar book published years hence may then be more complete, more accurate, or better organized. Here we have made only a beginning—a concrete effort to discover and to preserve knowledge of our area—fact or legend—which the celebration of our Bicentennial Year brought to our attention, material which we considered too precious to remain forever oral or eternally filed away where access is difficult. The recipe book, Once Upon A Time, Good Things from Long Ago (for which we are indebted to Miss Frances Blackwood), has been repeated here in its entirety so that it may enjoy the merited benefit of a hard cover. May each reader find in this book something to enjoy, something of his roots, something to clear up a mystery, something of which he can be proud—as a citizen of Alloway Township, an old and honorable community.
