

The Math Bomb: Economic Depressions are Caused by the Second Monetary Function Revision 1

The original was written in Spring 2014. In Sept-Oct 2014 I tweaked a few things and added a bit, making this Revision 1. We built ourselves a Bi-modal Monetary System, without Economists realizing it. Which means it can operate in two directions. It will operate in the Monetary Inflation Mode, until the Implementation of it cant keep up the required pace. At which point it simply reverses operational direction, to the Monetary Deflation Mode. Which constitutes a Depression. The Economy subsequently slows as a 4th level symptom. To fully comprehend how it works isnt particularly difficult. But it requires comprehending a few things differently and beyond the conventional paradigm.
