

Year of the Raven: An anglers reflections on Albertas most frustrating stream

Reflections on a year fly fishing for trout in the North Fork of the Raven (aka Stauffer Creek) in Alberta. This is not a how-to book; in fact, it may be the first how-not-to book youve ever read about fishing. One moment its lyrical, the next it screams with frustration. Part memoir, part novel, the author calls it fly fiction. We cast a fly (itself a ruse) to deceive a fishan animal that, literally, lives within a lie. If it really exists and is caught, we release it and are left without physical evidence. It may be a small psychological step to fabricate the entire process. What, in the final analysis, is the difference between memory and imagination anyway?
