

But Can I Start a Sentence with But?: Advice from the Chicago Style Q&A (Chicago Guides to Writing, Editing, and Publishing)

Q. Is it happy medium or happy median? My author writes: We would all be much better served as stewards of finite public funds if we could find that happy median where trust reigns supreme. Thanks! A. The idiom is happy medium, but I like the image of commuters taking refuge from road rage on the happy median. Q. How do I write a title of a song in the body of the work (caps, bold, underline, italics, etc.)? Example: The Zombies Shes Not There looped in his head. A. Noooo! Now that song is looping in my head (but its too late to say youre sorry ...). Use quotation marks. Thanks a lot. Every month, tens of thousands of self-declared word nerds converge upon a single site: The Chicago Manual of Style OnlinesQ&A. There the Manuals editors open the mailbag and tackle readers questions on topics ranging from abbreviation to word division to how to reform that coworker who still insists on two spaces between sentences. Champions of common sense, the editors offer smart, direct, and occasionally tongue-in-cheek responses that have guided writers and settled arguments for more than fifteen years. But Can I Start a Sentence with But? brings together the best of theChicago Style Q&A. Curated from years of entries, it features some of the most popularand hotly debatedrulings and also recovers old favorites long buried in the archives. Questions touch on myriad matters of editorial stylecapitalization, punctuation, alphabetizing, special charactersas well as grammar, usage, and beyond (How do I spell out the sound of a scream?). A foreword by Carol Fisher Saller, the Q&As longtime editor, takes readers through the history of the Q&A and addresses its reputation for mischief. (Its not that we set out to be cheeky, she writes.) Taken together, the questions and answers offer insights into some of the most common issues that face anyone who works with words. Theyre also a comforting reminder
