

Report from the 1999 National Conference on Workplace Safety and Health Training

In 1999, members of the occupational safety and health community met in St. Louis, Missouri to put together the pieces of a picture of health and safety training, including current practices and future needs. Occupational safety and health training in the next decade will take place against a backdrop of rapidly changing workforces and workplaces. These changes create new issues and opportunities for trainers, and these issues and opportunities comprise some of the important pieces discussed in this conference.
