

Fly-Fishing with Children

Author Philip Brunquell, a pediatric neurologist, parent, and ardent fly-angler, combines extensive knowledge of fly-fishing with a deep understanding of the needs and aspirations of children. Writing with humor and often lyrically, Brunquell demonstrates conclusively that even young children can enjoy fly-fishing. At the same time, relationships between parents and children will be enriched, and children will become more aware of the need to conserve our fragile freshwater resources. For children not yet ready to fly-cast, Brunquell suggests alternate ways of presenting the fly. For older children, he recommends basic casts to learn and ways to practice casting, playing, and landing fish. You'll find advice on selecting economical tackle and simple modifications to make it easier for children to use. Safety issues, such as choosing protective clothing, taking precautions against Lyme disease, and administering first aid, are emphasized. A special chapter, The Disabled Child, offers advice on improving stream access and making casting equipment easier for the disabled to use.
