

Grand Civic and Military, Vol. 2: Demonstration in Honor of the Removal of the Remains of James Monroe, Fifth President of the United States, From New York to Virginia (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from Grand Civic and Military, Vol. 2: Demonstration in Honor of the Removal of the Remains of James Monroe, Fifth President of the United States, From New York to Virginia. The removal of the honored remains of James Monroe, from their quiet resting-place, in the city of New-York, to the State of Virginia, forms an interesting episode in the history of the country. He was the fifth President of the United States. Of this number, three, including himself, died on the Fourth of July - the Anniversary of American Independence. Of the whole number, he, alone, died beyond the bounds of his native State. Washington, Adams, Jefferson, and Madison, each expired within the State of his nativity. He did not, however, die amidst strangers, for the whole Union was his home, and the entire nation mourned his loss. To Virginia, which had shared so largely and beneficially in his public services, was his memory ever dear; but, knowing that wherever, in the bounds of the Union, he fell asleep, his grave would be watched and cherished by his patriotic fellow-citizens, she was slow to reclaim his remains.
