The further you advance in the game, the better your competition will be. The most significant difference between levels of basketball is not the players in the 65-and-under range. There are many guards playing overseas and in the D-League that could easily be the 9th or 10th man on an NBA roster, and the reverse is also true. The biggest difference when moving up levels in basketball is the skill and size of the bigs (power forwards & centers). They get bigger, faster, smarter and react quicker. You must adjust. And unless you're LeBron James or Blake Griffin, you won't be able to dunk on all of them, every time you drive. You must be able to finish scoring forays with a variety of techniques, and create space from bigger opponents trying to block your way path. This Handbook addresses that need.
