

Intersect on the Media Information Highway

The biographical story of three ordinary extraordinary men from China, Japan and the United States, growing up and coming of age during the Great Depression, the Second World War and the Korean War. Each author gives us his unique perspective on the world events surrounding and shaping his life...the Cultural Revolution in China, the Sexual Revolution in the democracies, and the Information Revolution worldwide. The common threads binding these men are their humble backgrounds, resilience in the face of adversity, thirst for knowledge, drive, ambition, sense of humor and serendipitous globetrotting career paths. Born within months of one another, their lives follow incredibly similar patterns, finally converging in the nineties as they are pulled together by their careers in media communications. This is a great read for anyone with an interest in broadcasting, or with a passion for authentic 20th century history and international cooperation.
