

Generations, Diversity, & Leadership, OH-MY!

Are you a leader? If so, have you ever wondered what else could you do to foster a better relationship with your employees, increase employee buy-in, task efficiency, and overall productivity? Are you tired of trying the newest employee management trends and not achieving sustainable results? There's help available! The following brief work serves as an introduction to the areas of generational cohorts, organizational cultural diversity, and the effect leadership styles have within the new multigenerational, multicultural, and multinational workforce. The focus of this work is not to draw conclusions or offer solutions to the most common but often-missed opportunities in the aforementioned dimensions, but it may serve as a foundation from which to question your current views regarding accepted knowledge of heterogeneous generational groups, cultural diversity as it affects productivity, and the two most widely used leadership approaches: transformational and transactional leadership.
