

Reaching toward God (Pendle Hill Pamphlets Book 237)

What can one reasonably believe about the reality and nature of God? If this is a living issue for you, then you are the person to whom I write. Some of us come to the God question out of a traditional religious background. Others (including me) come to it out of skepticism. Each of us evidently has some inkling of a greater presence, some glimpse of Light. But what does this experience signify? How valid are the old teachings? The question of God-what kind of God, and Gods relation to us has gnawed me for a long while. My seeking led me to a partial answer several years ago in my Pendle Hill pamphlet, Philosophy of the Inner Light. I was moved further by a Friendly study group I organized to explore the nature of spiritual divinity. Those experiences and other inward explorations brought me to the reality of a truly personal God. The present pamphlet gives my reasons for believing in such a God.
