

Software Engineering Approaches for Offshore and Outsourced Development: 4th International Conference, SEAFOOD 2010, St. Petersburg, Russia, June ... Notes in Business Information Processing)

Today's software production is increasingly distributed. Gone are the days of one-company, one-site projects; most industrial development now involves teams split over locations, countries, and cultures. This distribution poses new challenges, for example, how to develop the software requirements specification, and how to manage the project. These challenges are formidable; many failures have been reported in outsourced and distributed projects, often due to a lack of technical expertise, but to difficulties in management and communication. SEAFOOD 2010, the fourth international conference on Software Engineering Advances For Outsourced and Offshore Development, was held in Peterhof (Saint Petersburg), Russia, on 17-18 June 2010. SEAFOOD 2010 provides an opportunity for participants from academia and industry to confront experiences, ideas and proposals. The submissions received covered a wide range of topics, from country-wide reports from Russia and Argentina to global project management. This volume includes 8 papers (4 full papers and 4 short papers) from the conference, selected after review by the Program Committee. The program also included two keynote presentations and the extended abstracts are included in this volume: A Smarter Way: The Software Engineering Method and Theory Initiative (Semat), by Ivar Jacobson, and The Consortium for IT Software Quality, by Richard Mark Soley and Bill Curtis. Many people contributed to SEAFOOD 2010. We thank the Program Committee and the external reviewers for their excellent work in reviewing and selecting the papers. The role of Andrei Voronkov's EasyChair conference system is gratefully acknowledged.
