

The Survivalist Papers Volume 2016-2: Big Blade? Little Blade? A Two Knife Showdown Between Chopper And Cutter.

In the survival knife world there are two opposing camps: Those who favor a big blade, and those who prefer a smaller blade. A large blade excels at some outdoor tasks like chopping, a smaller blade has more dexterity in finer cutting chores. There's a fair degree of overlap in what both can do around camp and along the trail, if your skills are up to it either can serve well as a survival tool. In this edition of The Survivalist Papers we take the TOPS Anaconda and Spydercos Proficient to the field for some comparisons in basic camp chores involving wood and food processing. Author and nephew both duplicate all chores with both knives and each votes for which of the two he chooses as his multi-tasking survival blade. Strengths and weakness discussed, with 26 color photos detailing features and use.
