

The Western Union and the War Labor Board: The Company's Position (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from The Western Union and the War Labor Board: The Company's Position<sup>4</sup>. It has for over ten years made it a condition that it would not employ persons who were members of such organizations or retain in its employ those who became members. Its policy in this regard was so well known that it was understood that those who accepted employment were considered to have agreed thereto.<sup>5</sup> The labor union involved in this matter has no membership whatever among this company's employees, but is an organization carrying on a propaganda to induce our employees to become members.<sup>6</sup> The labor union which invoked the interference of the National War Labor Board sought to secure an interpretation of the Board's principles that would in effect become a mandate of the Board in support of its propaganda to secure members from the staff of the company by inducing them to violate the conditions of their employment.
